Description

Bulgarian Royal Air Force pilot's insignia, from the period of the Kingdom of Bulgaria, circa 1935-1940. The insignia features a richly detailed design: a royal crown at the top, a silver laurel and oak wreath, a golden eagle in flight against a background of radiant blue enamel, and a red enamel shield bearing the Bulgarian lion at the bottom. The reverse features a screw-fastening system with a retaining plate. The elements on the reverse bear inscriptions in Cyrillic, including the mark of Strahil Miloshev's workshop in Sofia, as well as the number "3-23-89." Similar examples are generally described as Bulgarian Air Force pilot badges from the period of the Kingdom of Bulgaria, often dated to around 1935-1940 or associated with the type used between 1921 and 1943. The design is part of the symbolism of the
