Description

Small Louis-Philippe-era chest of drawers, crafted from solid varnished mahogany, with a Rio rosewood top. The piece features meticulous construction, with the fronts, sides, and back made of solid mahogany. The piece is accented by small, understated moldings characteristic of Louis-Philippe furniture. The chest of drawers features four drawers: a first drawer housed in the upper cove, two front drawers, and a fourth drawer concealed in the baseboard. The sides of the drawers are made of oak and feature traditional dovetail joints, in keeping with 19th-century cabinetmaking techniques. The three visible drawers are fitted with small handles made of natural materials. The Rio rosewood top, with its dark, contrasting grain, stands in sharp contrast to the warmer tones of the mahogany. Period:
