Description

Antique single-flower vase from the late 19th century, consisting of a long cobalt-blue glass tube with a widely undulating and scalloped rim. The glass features a white floral design applied using hot-enameling. The blue hue, which is deeper at the neck, gradually lightens toward the bottom of the vase. The vase is held in place by a gilded metal mount with a plant motif. The mount is embellished with several carved mother-of-pearl elements shaped like leaves, featuring natural iridescent sheen. The entire piece rests on a base also made of mother-of-pearl, accented by a coiled band of gilded metal. Height: 29 cm. In very good overall condition.
