Description

A very attractive 19th-century wall-mounted glass display cabinet made of natural wood, particularly decorative thanks to its light, slender structure and numerous turned posts. It features several levels, allowing you to display a beautiful collection of glassware, earthenware, porcelain, or small decorative objects. Its series of shelves and slender turned balusters lend it a sense of rhythm and lightness. We particularly appreciate its beautiful antique patina, which has been intentionally left in its authentic state. The wood bears various marks and signs of age, notably old marks left by the glasses and objects that were once displayed there. These marks are visible in the photographs and are an integral part of this antique piece's charm and history. At just 14.5 cm deep, this glass cabinet is particularly easy to
