A painter of the "new free figuration" movement of the 1980s. An Aix native through and through, Aix was the city of his heart until the end of his life in 2021. Born to parents who were painters and makers of santons (traditional Provençal nativity figures), he won first prize in the City of Aix painting competition twice, at ages 8 and 11. discovered Impressionism, which would influence him well into the 1970s. Jacques Pellegrin is a self-taught painter. His relentless exploration led him to discover German Expressionism as well as Fauvism and its masters, Matisse and Chabaud. He developed a deep admiration for French Expressionism--including Van Gogh, Derain, Marquet, and Von Dongen--as well as for the Provençal and Marseillais schools, represented by artists such as Verdilhan and Ambrogiani. An epicurean, Jacques Pellegrin perfectly captures, through canvases reminiscent of Art Deco, the atmosphere and Provençal way of life. At times caustic, at times caricatural, he takes risks, even if it means occasionally shocking the puritanical. All his artistic passions are accompanied by a genuine love of life, celebration, and people. As for colors, of course, his palette ranges from warm shades of blue and gray to bold, vibrant tones accented by black outlines. His painting, both tender and human, tells a story, an anecdote, or a memory, through his favorite themes: daily life, the Provençal countryside, the city, ports, interiors, women, cafés, cabarets, and their musicians...Firmly rooted in his time, when Jacques Pellegrin evokes the past, he does so without nostalgia, but simply with affection. He exhibited regularly throughout his career in his region and presented his works around the world: Sweden, Germany, China, Hong Kong, Miami, Dubai, Casablanca, Marrakech....He is recognized and listed in the 1999 and 2006 editions of Benezit.
