Description

An extraordinary and extremely rare devotional painting on glass, depicting the Virgin Mary in a pensive and contemplative pose, characterized by a delicate spiritual expression and refined color rendering. The work is attributed to the Neapolitan school of the mid-18th century, a period of great artistic and devotional fervor in the Kingdom of Naples. The figure of the Virgin, surrounded by a crown of stars--a symbol of purity and heavenly grace--is rendered with remarkable painterly sensitivity, typical of the southern Italian tradition, where glass painting was intended for cultured patrons and private religious circles. The technique, which is extremely difficult to execute, lends the image an intense luminosity and a distinctive visual depth. The painting is set in a finely crafted silver
