Description

A very beautiful and large Art Nouveau-era vase (circa 1900) made of Bohemian glass, produced by the Wilhelm Kralik Söhne glassworks. This is a large piece, 26 cm tall, featuring the "Draped" design. The iridescence is magnificent and very luminous, with stunning, shifting reflections of purple, blue, and green depending on the light. The shape is intricate and original: the body is symmetrically pressed at four points (quadrilobed shape) and ends in a beautifully undulating neck. Like almost all Kralik glassware from this period, the piece is unsigned; however, it features a very high-quality finish on the base, with a perfectly ground, smooth, and concave circular pontil--typical of fine period pieces. The vase is in perfect condition. It has no chips or cracks, and its iridescence shows no
