A very elegant late 19th-century (circa 1890) Meissen porcelain *vide-poches* (small tray) in the shape of a basket. The piece features remarkable relief decoration comprising naturalistic flowers and foliage, delicately highlighted in soft green, pink, and red, with touches of gilding. The basket is fitted with a large handle modeled as a leafy stem. The rim is worked in relief, evoking plant matter or woven wicker. The piece is highly representative of the emerging Art Nouveau aesthetic, drawing direct inspiration from the natural world. Height: 11 cm; diameter: 13 cm. Perfect condition. A highly decorative piece of fine craftsmanship that would make a natural addition to a collection of late 19th-century German porcelain. Carefully and securely packed.
