Description

A charming French rustic chair crafted in solid oak, dating from around the turn of the twentieth century. Combining sturdy rural craftsmanship with subtle provincial elegance, the chair features a traditional ladder-back design with four shaped slats, a handwoven rush seat, and gracefully curved cabriole front legs. The warm oak frame displays a rich patina acquired through decades of use, highlighting the natural character of the wood and the quality of its construction.

Distinctive turned elements and a turned front stretcher add decorative interest, while the cabriole legs introduce a refined touch that elevates the chair beyond purely utilitarian country furniture. Its woven rush seat provides both visual warmth and textural contrast, embodying the timeless appeal of French
