Description

An elegant Louis XV style stool crafted in France around 1900, embodying the graceful curves and decorative refinement associated with the eighteenth-century Rococo tradition. Raised on slender cabriole legs, the stool displays a beautifully shaped apron adorned with finely carved floral motifs, lending the piece a light and sophisticated silhouette. The seat retains its original damask upholstery in a soft green tone with woven floral and scrolling patterns, finished with a row of decorative brass nails. The richly textured fabric contributes to the stool's authentic period character and decorative appeal, while the warm patina of the carved wooden frame enhances its charm. Equally suited as a vanity stool, fireside seat, bedroom accent, or occasional piece, this stool brings a touch of French elegance
