Description

A significant pair of castle curtains made of jacquard fabric woven with gold metallic threads, dating from the late 19th century, circa 1880-1900. These elegant curtains feature a Neo-Renaissance-inspired design composed of stylized palmettes, flowers, and ornamental motifs set against a deep blue background. The design, created using the Jacquard weaving technique and enriched with gold metallic threads woven into the weft, offers a subtle texture as well as delicate shimmering effects characteristic of ceremonial fabrics intended for prestigious residences of the late 19th century. The pair is fully lined, reflecting its original intended use in a castle, a private mansion, or a large bourgeois home. The curtains retain their original hanging system, consisting of small rings connected by fabric ties. The set is sold with its two original tiebacks made of twisted trimmings in shades of blue-green, as well as its matching valance. These original elements enhance the decorative appeal and authenticity of this rare set, which has retained all of its accessories. Given their substantial dimensions, these curtains were intended to frame large windows. The richness of the design, the refined combination of deep blue and golden highlights, and the Renaissance-inspired pattern give this pair a particularly striking decorative presence today. They could be returned to their original purpose in a historic home or used as a monumental wall hanging in a classic or contemporary interior design project.
