Description

Small bust of an Oriental man wearing a turban, polychrome terracotta proof. Publisher's signature on the back, number 524 A 25, and the notation "reproduction reserved". Superb patina. Frédéric Goldshneider was born in 1845 in the Czech Republic and died in France in 1897. In 1894, he took over his father's ceramics factory in Bohemia and moved to Vienna to market porcelain trinkets and objects. But it was his terracotta sculptures on the theme of Orientalism--very much in vogue at the time--that brought him success and fame. Together with his sons, he founded other factories and branches throughout Europe and as far as the United States. Many museums house his works. Our piece is in perfect condition, never restored; a small piece of terracotta must have broken off inside.
