Condition : Bon état

Material : Glass

Diameter : 6.8 cm

Description

A fascinating late 18th-century Central European reverse-glass painting, or Hinterglasmalerei, dated 1779, depicting a characterful tavern scene in the manner of the Dutch and Flemish Old Masters. The man, wearing a pale cap and dramatically illuminated against the dark interior, is seated at a table with a smoking pipe and ale glass. The subject recalls the celebrated tavern and peasant scenes of artists such as David Teniers and Adriaen van Ostade, whose compositions were widely disseminated through engravings during the 18th century. The reverse bears an old signature or inscription which appears to read "J. Müller", together with the clearly legible date 1779. The painting has been temporarily removed from its frame for photography purposes and will be supplied in its
