

Boulenger, Silver Timbale, Late 19th Century

Description

Solid silver goblet-shaped cup featuring a decorative design typical of the Art Nouveau style, consisting of interlacing patterns and floral motifs framing a cartouche intended to hold a numeral. Minerva hallmark near the rim. Partially erased silversmith's mark beneath the base: "BOULENGER" surmounting a crescent, stamped on June 23, 1876, and struck through on April 9, 1899. The Boulenger silversmithy was founded in 1810 under the name Hautin before being taken over in 1864 by Adolphe Boulenger, the founder's nephew. He set up shop at 4 rue de Vertbois in Paris, while a factory was built in Créteil. In 1898, his son Charles took over management of the company and significantly expanded the factory. Specializing in high-end tableware, Boulenger was one of the most
