Description

A Balinese carved and polychrome wooden guardian figure, Dvarapala, dating from the 19th century. Depicted seated with a club held against his shoulder, the figure has an expressive face with bulging eyes and prominent fangs. His elaborate headdress, jewellery and patterned garments are carefully carved, as is the scrolling base with its central grotesque mask. Retaining substantial green, black and ochre polychrome decoration with traces of gilding. Wear and losses to the painted surface reveal the warm colour of the wood beneath. Height: 20.4 cm.
