Description

Oil on canvas depicting a horse race from the early 20th century. An equestrian scene depicting several horses galloping at full speed, ridden by jockeys. The composition emphasizes movement and a sense of speed, with the horses rendered in broad, colorful brushstrokes and a particularly expressive texture. Earthy tones of ochre, brown, yellow, and green create a landscape deliberately reduced to a few horizontal planes, allowing the group of riders to take center stage. The highly detailed execution combines impasto and visible brushstrokes that give depth to the horses and figures. The overall effect evokes a scene from a horse race or training session, captured in collective motion.
