Description

Chrome Art Deco chandelier; the central shaft, the connecting ring, and the 5 curved arms are made of metal with a mirror-like finish. Late Art Deco / Modernism (1930s-1940s) and Mid-Century Design A distinctive feature is the globe mounting system, which uses metal washers to secure each glass globe with visible clamping screws. The globes are made of opaline glass (white opaline): a matte/satin-finished milky white glass, ideal for diffusing soft, glare-free light. "Pumpkin" or "melon" shape: The globes are molded with raised vertical ribs or fluting, adding volume and movement. 2. Configuration and Structure Number of light points: 5 (4 globes arranged in a circle on the outer arms + 1 central globe pointing downward). Architecture: A vertical tubular shaft connecting the ceiling rose
