Description

An elegant Neapolitan Louis XV chest of drawers, crafted in the mid-18th century from fine bois de violette and rosewood, finely inlaid with refined and harmonious style. The undulating lines, characteristic of both the front and the sides, fully embody the Rocaille style of the period. The piece features two large drawers with handles and pull plates in gilded bronze, crafted with great refinement, which further enhance the structure. The composition is completed by the original top in yellow Siena marble, with warm natural veining, perfectly shaped to follow the sinuous curve of the cabinet body. An example of high-quality 18th-century Neapolitan cabinetmaking, combining aesthetic refinement with the masterful craftsmanship of the era. Period: Mid-18th century; Provenance:
