Description

- Oil on canvas. Hand-signed.- Like a metaphysical apparition suspended outside of time, the imposing mass of Orvieto Cathedral rises with monumental austerity--worthy of De Chirico--above the turbulent sea of terracotta rooftops that make up the medieval town. The impeccable two-tone contrast of its layers of travertine and basalt, silhouetted against a still sky, imposes an absolute and almost theatrical silence, transforming the overwhelming Gothic volume into a living structure made of elongated shadows and architectural enigmas. Below, the old clay roofs in warm tones cluster together in humble submission, while the monumental façade--vertical, enigmatic, powerful--dominates the emptiness of the volcanic plateau, transforming the urban perspective into a scene
