Description

This touching genre composition, painted in oil on a wooden panel in the late 18th century by an unknown European master, reveals the theme of family bonds with tender emotion. By the wall of a stone house, decorated with peony bushes and a latticed window entwined with a grapevine, a delicate scene unfolds: the father, resting his chin on his hand upon a cane, listens with love and attention to one of his daughters, who seems to be explaining something to her father. Behind him, his wife in a lace cap tenderly holds the youngest of the daughters close to her. In the left background, another female figure can be discerned at a spinning wheel; a faithful dog, which has settled under its master's chair, and a small basket of fresh fruit emphasize the overall atmosphere of a family idyll. The composition is
