Description

DAUM NANCY - Art Nouveau Vase "Ophrys, Bees, and Spider Web" - circa 1900 A rare small double-walled glass vase by Daum Nancy, with a flared shape and a multi-lobed opening, featuring a remarkable naturalistic design characteristic of the Art Nouveau style. The glass background, in shades of yellow-orange, ochre, and brown, creates a particularly rich marbled effect. The design is enlivened by Ophrys-type orchid flowers, stylized foliage, and bees in flight. In the background of the composition appears a delicate spiderweb, subtly integrated into the design. This detail adds an extra layer of naturalism and fully contributes to the theme combining flowers, insects, and elements of nature--a motif particularly favored in Daum's creations around 1900. The lower, darker section is adorned with an
