Description

- Oil on canvas. Original canvas.- Characterized by a geometric simplicity and chromatic austerity that directly evoke the style of Martínez Novillo, the painting reduces the rural architecture of Castile to vast expanses of whitewashed walls, dark adobe, and barren rooftops where time seems to have stood still. It is there, at the foot of this dark and austere mass casting its shadow on the dirt road, that a tiny speck of pure light stands out: the philosopher chicken, silhouetted in immaculate white against the vastness of the moor. Tiny yet upright, a minuscule beacon of consciousness amid the Castilian silence, the animal embodies the existential paradox in the face of the absolute; a point of radiance, at once almost ridiculous and moving, that questions the transience of the flesh in the face of the earth's
