Description

???? Pair of tripod stools attributed to Audoux & Minet - wood and braided ropeA very beautiful pair of vintage tripod stools attributed to Adrien Audoux & Frida Minet, in that aesthetic that is at once rustic, free-spirited, and deeply Mediterranean--a hallmark of their work with natural materials.???? Their charm stems first and foremost from this simple combination of wood left intentionally raw and thick seats made of woven natural fiber. No superfluous embellishments: the material, the artisanal craftsmanship, and the passage of time set the entire scene.???? The seats are particularly beautiful, featuring a generous and highly textured weave, worked in a spiral pattern on top and then in broad interlacing on the sides. Their thickness gives them the appearance of small cushions carved from the fiber.???? The three wooden legs, slightly flared and each subtly different, retain their irregularities, nuances, and natural marks. These small variations give each stool its own personality and reinforce their artisanal character.? The color palette is superb: shades of straw, honey, sand, and weathered light wood, easy to incorporate into both traditional and contemporary interiors. They work just as well in a Mediterranean setting as they do in a brutalist, wabi-sabi, or country-chic atmosphere.? Together, they form a particularly decorative pair. Their tall, light silhouette contrasts with the almost organic volume of the woven seats, creating a very successful balance between rustic charm and elegance.???? They are preserved in beautiful, authentic condition, without excessive restoration to maintain their patina. A few small, old holes are present in the wood, bearing witness to their history; a preventive treatment has been applied.???? It is precisely these small irregularities, the patina of the wood, and the natural nuances of the weaving that give them their charm: two pieces that are anything but industrial and in which the craftsmanship is immediately apparent.???? They can, of course, be used as occasional seating, but also as small nightstands, end tables, or decorative pieces--either on their own or paired with furniture made of wood, rattan, ceramic, or stone.???? Approximate dimensions: Height: 46 cm Seat: Ø 29 cm Leg span: 35 to 40 cm???? A truly beautiful pair, decorative and commanding, straddling the line between folk furniture, craftsmanship, and 20th-century French design. Attribution to Audoux & Minet is suggested based on the design and the workmanship in the wood and fiber; in the absence of a signature or documentation, this remains an attribution.????
