Description

Elegant mahogany column, dating from around 1830, characterized by a refined cylindrical structure and a striking circular marble top. The body of the column features a drawers that opens seamlessly integrated into the structure, with a small knob. The lower section is embellished with pronounced scabious-style decoration and ends with an elegant flared support on a square base. The rich grain of the mahogany, the balanced proportions, and the contrast with the marble top lend the piece a remarkable decorative presence. Period: circa 1830 Materials: mahogany and marble Type: column cabinet with drawer
