Description

A biscuit porcelain bust depicting Queen Marie Antoinette, a model traditionally known as the "Wengmüller bust." The queen is depicted with an elaborate, up-styled, and abundantly curled hairstyle, adorned with ribbons and pearls, in the style of late 18th-century court portraits. The face is rendered with delicacy, while the hairstyle and the drapery of the garment are rendered with particularly detailed modeling. The bust rests on a rectangular pedestal integrated into the composition. A 19th-century piece made of white bisque porcelain, based on the famous iconographic type of Marie Antoinette associated with Wengmüller. An incised mark is visible on the reverse of the drapery. In perfect condition. Height: 34 cm.
