Description

A charming, small, and original floral still life dating from the early 19th century, painted in oil on an oak panel. The composition depicts a delicate bouquet of flowers arranged in a small blue vase with an unusual shape, reminiscent of a shoe. Pale pink roses, small white flowers, and orange blossoms stand out against a warm brown background. A few fallen petals are delicately depicted on the surface of the table. With its intimate scale, unusual subject matter, and fine details, this small painting possesses a particularly decorative and endearing character. A red inscription is visible in the lower left corner. The artist has not been identified. The work is set in an Italian gilded wooden frame, added after the painting was completed. Richly adorned with swirling foliage motifs and decorative borders,
