Description

Oil on canvas. A large pastoral scene depicting a herd of cattle and sheep drinking from the river, while on the left a shepherdess gives directions to a traveler; in the background are blue-tinged rocky hills. The back of the canvas bears the inscription "School of Domenico Brandi": the painting style does indeed recall that of the Neapolitan landscape painter (1684-1736), who became renowned for his bucolic landscapes animated by pastoral figures. It could therefore be the work of a student or follower. The painting has undergone restoration and re-lining in the past. It currently shows signs of soiling. It is presented in a period frame.
