Description

Two-section carved oak sideboard - recessed front - Regional craftsmanship - early 20th century An important two-section sideboard in solid oak, featuring fine cabinetmaking, with a dynamic design and rich carved decoration of flowering branches and plant motifs. The lower section opens via two side doors and three drawers in the center. The interior of one of the compartments features an interesting small four-drawer cabinet for storing cutlery. The upper section, set slightly back, features three doors with heavily molded panels, separated by two open niches. The facades are enlivened by scalloped panels, generous moldings, and floral carvings running along the crossbars. Also noteworthy are the beautiful brass hardware and keyholes, as well as the curved legs and dynamic
