Description

This refined plaster/stone bas-relief, crafted in a neoclassical and Greco-Roman style, depicts the traditional ceremony of dextrarum iunctio (the joining of right hands between bride and groom). At the center, the veiled bride holds hands with her groom, supported by a female figure (the pronuba or an attendant) guiding her with a subtle gesture. The figures feature beautifully sculpted drapery and graceful proportions. A timeless, classic work of art with strong archaeological appeal, perfect for antique collectors and fine art interiors.
