Description

Very large, double-sided Art Deco-era desk made of mottled oak - Circa 1930 A significant Art Deco cabinet desk with compartments, crafted from beautiful oak with a strongly defined grain--speckled oak--featuring a warm honey hue. The piece features a design characteristic of the 1930s, with geometric lines, softened corners, and a large, molded rectangular top. The fronts are enlivened by a remarkable arrangement of wood panels in geometric patterns. Highly functional, this desk rests on two side cabinets closed by large doors. These offer ample storage space: internal drawers, shelves, and filing compartments. The small drawers are fitted with half-moon metal handles. A central lock is also located beneath the top. The desk is also notable for its monumental appearance and impressive
