Rectangular Copper Cauldron With A Bronze Lid And Handles--france, 19th Century

280 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Copper

Length : 40

Description

Rectangular copper French "Daubière" (braising pan) with a deep body, featuring two side handles made of bronze and its original lid with a central bronze handle--incised letter "B" on the top of the lid (likely a model or workshop mark). Handcrafted from thick copper, with traces of shaping and a very attractive patina. The exterior copper has been thoroughly cleaned with a lot of love and elbow grease, and then carefully polished, which really brings out the warm color of the copper. In good overall condition despite its advanced age, with signs of use. A beautiful antique kitchen item, now particularly decorative, sought after for its authentic character and striking presence. It could, why not, be repurposed as a bread box with a dish towel or linen cloth inside. France, late 19th century. Dimensions: L. 40
