Description

A frosted glass cylindrical vase with a polychrome enamel floral design, depicting a large iris flower with petals unfurled in shades of mauve, purple, and white, accented with touches of yellow and orange. The flower, accompanied by a bud, stands out against a background of translucent glass with a frosted surface, offering a subtle contrast to the colors of the decoration. The lower portion features a stylized plant motif in gold, echoing the frieze of drop-shaped gold motifs that accentuates the vase's neck. The sleek cylindrical shape, the naturalistic rendering of the flower, and the combination of frosted glass, enamel, and gilding are characteristic of decorative works from the Art Nouveau period. Dated to the late 19th or early 20th century, circa 1900. In good overall condition,
