

A Georgian-era Naval Officer's Dagger With Gilded Mountings And A Leather Sheath

1 000 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Wrought iron

Length : 41 cm

Description

A dagger from the early 19th century, attributed to a British Royal Navy officer from the Napoleonic Wars period. The curved blade features etched decoration on both sides. The finely crafted hilt, with a checkered pattern, is adorned with a gilded pommel in the shape of a lion's head and a guard chain. The guard features lion heads at the ends and a central medallion depicting a lion's mask. The set comes with its leather scabbard, presumed to be original, with gilded fittings and two suspension rings. Visible signs of age and use: wear on the gilding, stains on the blade, crazing, and localized surface loss on the leather of the scabbard. Dimensions: Total length with sheath: 41 cm Total length of the dagger: 40.5 cm Blade length: 30 cm

Dealer

Art Classique

curiosités, art premier et Asiatique

Mobile : 0032-475272534

Bilzen 3740