Description

Antique half-moon-shaped piece of furniture in the Directoire style. The body is adorned with rich panels veneered in flamed mahogany, assembled "book-matched," creating a symmetrical and fluid wood-grain pattern on the curved front doors and the straight, tapered legs. It is topped by a chiseled marble slab with dark veins, which serves both as a sturdy stabilizer and a highly practical surface. It perfectly exemplifies the transitional Directoire style, bridging the ornate geometries of Louis XVI craftsmanship with the more austere and majestic forms that defined the Empire period of the early 19th century. A key is included to open the central drawer and the two-door storage compartment in the lower section. 144 cm wide, 52 cm deep, and 96 cm high. In good vintage condition, with signs of wear consistent with its
