Description

A pair of decorative painted wooden panels, likely from an Alsatian workshop or, more broadly, from the Rhine region, dating from the 19th century. Each panel features a polychrome design of a vase of flowers, arranged in a symmetrical and decorative composition, with gilded highlights. The painting is executed on panels of softwood, preserved unframed. In terms of their composition, color palette, and decorative character, these panels are part of the tradition of 19th-century Alsatian and Rhineland folk art. They may have come from a set of wood paneling or painted furniture. Period: mid-19th century. Condition: generally good condition, preserved in the state in which they were discovered. Slight wear, scuffing, and minor signs of aging and use, as shown in the
