Description

Extendable walnut leaf table, dating from the mid-19th century, Italy. With the leaves extended, the tabletop takes on an oval shape and features the refined aesthetic typical of the period. Support is provided by four turned legs ending in casters, which facilitate movement, and by two additional central support legs, ideal for reinforcing the structure that originally accommodated the extension leaves, which are now missing. The choice of walnut gives the table an elegant, warm tone, making it perfect for spaces that call for a touch of history and class. This piece exemplifies the craftsmanship of the period, combining functionality and style. Product condition: Due to its age and wear, this item requires restoration and refinishing.
