Description

Mahogany box set complete with paints and accessories for photo-painting. This box set contains tubes of paint and numerous accessories. The top panel features two "Before/After" examples of photo-painting retouching. Inside, there are compartments for bottles of glue or varnish, as well as a roll of paper. The paint tubes are stored beneath the palette. A Photo-Hall treatise on painting dating from 1898 is inserted between the palette and the wooden panel containing the two photographs. In 1867, Joseph BOURGEOIS-AÎNE opened a paint store in Paris as well as a factory in Montreuil, where he manufactured the first so-called "non-hazardous" paints intended for art schools. Later, he would offer his paints for retouching in photography. Link to the website
