Description

A rare and imposing mid-19th-century wall-mounted water pump, dating from around 1850, featuring remarkable ornamental cast iron work. The main body of the pump is cast iron, with a copper piston body. It is equipped with a brass main valve as well as a brass drain valve at the bottom. The upper section, which is particularly richly decorated, features a cast-iron Medici vase adorned with scrolls, foliage, and a bunch of grapes. The entire unit is mounted on its original oak wall bracket, which fully contributes to the piece's authenticity and presentation. The pump retains its mechanism, lever control system, and valve components. In very good condition, with a beautiful antique patina. Date: circa 1850 Materials: cast iron, copper, brass, and oak Dimensions: H. 235 × W. 66 × D. 43
