Description

History & Design Created in the early 1950s by Italian-American sculptor Harry Bertoia, the "Wire" chair transcends the simple seat to become a true domestic sculpture. This iconic model, produced by Knoll, is the perfect example of modernist functionalism: a graphic, airy silhouette that blends with striking elegance into any contemporary space. CRAFTMANSHIP & VINTAGE MATERIALS This vintage set showcases the original manufacturing techniques. The frame consists of a solid steel wire lattice, meticulously assembled using a brass brazing process, before being finished with a black paint coating. Absolute authenticity: The authenticity of this set is certified by its original seat pads (blue and red), which bear the Knoll signature/label underneath the seat. CONDITION REPORT

(Transparency & Historic Patina) ?This set is an authentic vintage piece "in its original condition."

The frame is perfectly sturdy, but the aesthetic features a pronounced patina that tells its story and attests to its age: ?The original black finish has worn away at friction points over the decades. ?This wear dramatically reveals the golden hints of brass at the weld intersections. ?The bare steel core, exposed over time, has developed a classic oxidation (red/orange surface rust), emphasizing its raw, industrial character. ?A vibrant patina, ideal for vintage design purists. ?1915-1978
