Description

A superb large Art Nouveau-era dining table (circa 1900) made of walnut with molded and carved details. This piece stands out for the high quality of its cabinetmaking and its elegant base carved with stylized botanical motifs, typical of the decorative repertoire of the École de Nancy. The molded legs are topped with sculpted botanical scrollwork in a whip-like curve and are joined by a dynamic crossbar featuring fluid, organic lines. The original tabletop, with its rounded corners, rests on a finely molded cove-shaped rim. Thanks to its very sturdy wooden sliding mechanism and its end support leg equipped with casters, this table offers exceptional seating capacity. When extended: it accommodates 5 extension leaves, each 50 cm long, bringing its total length to 3.90 meters.
