Description

A superb and rare pair of large, six-sided outdoor lanterns made of wrought iron and riveted iron, dating from around 1900. These pieces stand out for their exceptional size and high-quality craftsmanship. Of great architectural elegance, they feature a large hexagonal dome at the top, crowned with a gilded ball. Their Louis XIV or Regency-style design is enhanced by refined ironwork details, notably stylized volute (S-shaped) consoles beneath the dome, as well as a magnificent lower base with curved legs that also end in scrollwork. Both lanterns open via a pivot door equipped with a toggle latch and wrought-iron hinges. Authenticity and patina: Originally designed for gas lighting (the internal tubing system remains visible), they are in their superb original condition as found. The
