Description

A finely carved elephant figurine in the Fabergé style, crafted from bloodstone (heliotrope) in the 20th century. This compact sculpture is distinguished by its nearly spherical form and expressive silhouette, with the trunk elegantly curled against the body. The finely chiseled folds of the skin, the perfectly polished surface of the stone, and the ruby cabochon eyes lend the piece remarkable decorative quality. The natural texture of the bloodstone, enlivened by its characteristic deep-red inclusions, makes each piece unique. This work carries on the tradition of Russian hardstone sculpture inspired by the creations of the House of Fabergé, where the intrinsic beauty of ornamental stones and the expressiveness of animal depictions played an essential role. Dimensions: Height: 7 cm. Width: 7 cm.
