Description

A pair of striking and highly decorative Art Deco lamps, dating from the early 20th century, featuring an elegant black-painted metal body accented by remarkable chrome handles. These imposing lamps embody the sophisticated geometric aesthetic and contrasts of luxurious materials characteristic of the Art Deco movement, combining architectural proportions with a refined and timeless decorative presence. An elegant Art Deco design. These lamps stand out for their elegant silhouette, perfectly balanced proportions, and the sophisticated combination of deep black-painted metal and accents of polished chrome. The contrasting finishes create a striking visual effect, reflecting Art Deco's fascination with modern materials, clean lines, and bold decorative compositions. The chrome handles are particularly striking; they lend a sculptural dimension to the design while providing a dazzling metallic contrast against the dark surfaces. This combination of black and chrome was very much in vogue during the Art Deco period, a time when designers embraced the visual language of modernity, industrial elegance, and architectural symmetry. Impressive architectural proportions With a total height of 100 cm and a diameter of 44 cm, these lamps have an exceptional decorative presence. The lamp body alone measures 74 cm in height, highlighting their generous proportions and sculptural character. Their imposing scale makes them particularly well-suited for large console tables, entryways, elegant living rooms, hotel interiors, or refined contemporary spaces. Arranged symmetrically, this pair creates a powerful architectural effect, blending the glamour of early 20th-century design with the understated elegance of black and chrome. A remarkable pair of early 20th-century Art Deco lamps, distinguished by their generous dimensions, elegant contrasting finishes, and timeless decorative appeal. Sold as a pair.
