Description

A highly decorative Spanish wall-mounted coat rack from the 1950s, adorned with four bronze-carved stag heads. This unique vintage piece combines practical functionality with the traditional aesthetic characteristic of hunting lodges, country estates, and rustic European interiors. Four decorative bronze stag heads. This coat rack is distinguished by the arrangement of four finely sculpted bronze stag heads, creating an original and captivating composition inspired by the world of hunting. The stag has long been a major symbol of European hunting culture, associated with nobility, power, and the traditions of aristocratic country life. The bronze sculpted elements give the piece a unique character, transforming an ordinary household accessory into an attractive decorative object. The Spanish

Tradition of Hunting LodgesMade in Spain in the 1950s, this coat rack reflects the popularity of hunting-inspired decorative furniture in country homes, mountain retreats, and rural estates in Spain. These pieces were particularly prized for their combination of rustic charm, durable materials, and ornamental ironwork. The repeating pattern of deer heads creates a harmonious decorative rhythm, making the coat rack as appealing as a functional accessory as it is as a decorative wall piece. A piece that is both decorative and functionalMeasuring 60 cm wide, this coat rack has the ideal proportions for an entryway, hallway, walk-in closet, country house, or hunting lodge. Its compact dimensions allow it to blend into various types of interiors, while the bronze deer heads give it a striking sculptural presence. This piece would also make an excellent addition to a collection of vintage items related to hunting or mid-20th-century Spanish decorative arts. An original and characterful vintage Spanish coat rack from the 1950s, distinguished by its four bronze deer heads and its timeless hunting-inspired design.
