Description

A fine Louis XV-period buffet , dating from the 18th century, made of oak and featuring an elegant, curved silhouette on all sides. This characterful piece captivates with the remarkable quality of its craftsmanship, the harmony of its proportions, and the richness of its Louis XV lines. It is topped with its superb original marble top, featuring deep shades of brown, gray, and beige, with a molded and curved edge that perfectly follows the curves of the piece. This carved marble adds a touch of nobility and highlights the piece's overall elegance. The front features a drawer at the top and two molded doors, showcasing magnificent oak panels with expressive, warm grain. The wood's beautiful patina, the antique hardware, and the delicately scalloped lines attest to the authentic charm of
