Description

A very beautiful baluster vase in polychrome cloisonné enamel on metal, made in the Far East--probably Japan--and dating from the late 19th century. Elegant and slender in form, it rests on a richly decorated, flared pedestal and features a narrow neck opening into a wide, flared rim. It features a remarkable polychrome decoration of great ornamental richness, composed of shield-shaped medallions containing depictions of stylized dragons and fantastical birds, evoking the Eastern phoenix. These medallions are surrounded by delicate foliage scrolls, stylized flowers, and geometric friezes, in a beautiful harmony of red, blue, green, ivory, ochre, and brown against a dark background. The overall design is accentuated by the fine metal partitions characteristic of this enameling technique. The
