Description

FOLK ARTLate 19th centuryVery large monoxyl wooden bowl, carved--or rather, hollowed out--by handThe bowl was hollowed out by hand from a large section of a tree trunk or a tree stump. Some of the cracks in the wood around the rim were rudimentarily patched with metal plates bent to fit this makeshift repair. In the center, one can see an irregular section that may have corresponded to a knot or the heartwood of the trunk, which is more difficult to work with.Dimensions:51 to 47 cm in diameterand 20 to 17 cm in heightCondition: Superb overall patina resulting from its creative process and centuries of daily use.The carving stages performed by its maker are clearly visible and contribute to the exceptional aesthetic appeal of this bowl--intended to hold fruit, vegetables, or other
