Description

Important Solid oak chest from the late Gothic period (late 15th century- early 16th century) Its front features four panels carved with the so-called "napkin fold" motif (or pleated scrolls), highly representative of the decorative repertoire of the late Middle Ages. The top panel, consisting of two large planks, is reinforced by magnificent original hot-forged wrought-iron hinges, secured with forged rivets and ending in stylized spike motifs. The front is centered by its original wrought-iron lock set into a rectangular plate. We do not have the key. A piece of furniture of exceptional authenticity, displaying a beautiful patina from use and the natural wear of the wood due to its great age. Characteristics:
Period: Gothic (Late 15th /Early 16th century)
· Material: Solid oak and wrought iron ·
