Émile Guillemin (1841-1907) - Rebecca at the Fountain - 19th-century bronze
An elegant bronze sculpture with a brown patina featuring golden hues, depicting Rebecca at the Fountain, based on a work by the French sculptor Émile Coriolan Hippolyte Guillemin (1841-1907). The young woman, dressed in a draped gown in the classical style, stands on a rocky mound, delicately holding a cup in her hand. Her graceful posture, the softness of her face, and the natural movement of her clothing attest to particularly meticulous modeling. The delicacy of her hair--gathered in a bun and falling in long, wavy strands--as well as the richness of the drapery's folds, lend this composition great elegance. The subject is inspired by the biblical episode of Rebecca at the well, a figure of generosity and hospitality. The
