Description

Afghan Ziegler rug, handmade from wool This Afghan Ziegler rug captivates with its elegance and warm color palette, where the garnet red and antique pink of the central field complement the shades of golden beige, honey, and ivory of the borders. Its abundant floral design, composed of stylized flowers and delicately intertwined scrollwork, draws inspiration from the great classical motifs of the 19th century, reimagined in a softer, more weathered style. The design features a red central field, punctuated by a profusion of plant and floral motifs, framed by a wide border in golden and cream tones. The overall effect strikes a beautiful balance between rich ornamentation and soft colors, with a vintage charm that fits equally well in a classic interior as in a contemporary setting. Entirely hand-knotted from wool, this rug features a short pile that subtly catches the light on its surface. Depending on the direction of the pile and the viewing angle, the reds may appear deeper, lighter, or with subtle nuances. The treatment traditionally associated with the Ziegler style--which emphasizes muted colors and a slightly aged appearance--enhances its authentic character and antique-inspired aesthetic. Its natural patina, irregular shades, and generous floral motifs give it a warm, unpretentious presence. More than just a decorative rug, it adds depth, texture, and personality to a space. Dimensions: 2.56 x 3.68 meters Condition: beautiful patina from the wool's wear, with subtle color variations Note regarding colors: in the red area, a difference in tone may give the impression of certain spots depending on the direction from which the rug is viewed. This is an effect caused by the orientation of the pile and the reflection of light, particularly visible when viewing the rug against the grain.
